Revealing the Voices of Biblical Women

Don't just read their stories, learn to hear the voices of the women in the Bible.

Christianity has suffered from the effects of being written, interpreted, and conveyed by men over the centuries. This workshop advances an appreciation for the voice of biblical women and contemporary women, which contrasts long-held beliefs about our roles and value.

Through thoughtful and discerning consideration of biblical example, this workshop provides a framework for women to use their life experiences, intellect, and faith to question and interpret biblical texts, encouraging the full participation of women in Christian churches.

Designed as a workshop presentation of 45 minutes or longer, depending on the size of the group.

Dr. Paula Trimble-Familetti is a passionate advocate for women's rights, inclusive language, and biblical literacy. She spent thirty years as an elementary school teacher, afraid to follow her call to write the stories of biblical women, to advocate for women, and to further biblical literacy. She holds a B.A. in Religion from Chapman University, an M.A. in Religion from Liberty University, and a Doctor of Ministry in International Feminist Theology from San Francisco Theological Seminary. Paula taught Women and Religion and Women's History classes for Chapman University and is past co-convener of the Women's Caucus of the American Academy of Religion. She is a regular contributor to the Words of Faith column in the Desert Sun News. Her first book, Prostitutes, Virgins, and Mothers: Questioning Teachings About Biblical Women, won a gold medal in Bible study from Illumination Book Awards. Dr. Familetti has called the Coachella Valley home since 1957. Learn more on her website: <http://www.drtrimble-familetti.com/>.
